-The Cambridge and Oxford boat crews are now daily practising on the Thames, preparatory to the great race appointed for the 1st of April. -The celebration of St. Patrick's Day in Ireland yesterday was quite general, and up to late last night no disturbances were reported. -The debate on the reorganization of the British army was reopened in the House of Commons last night, by Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Gladstone. THE EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL ON THE HUMAN body, and when taken into the stomach is

System. - Alcohol forms no part of the living rapidly absorbed, or rather permeates the membranes and the ceats of the blood-vessels, and finds its way into the blood, with which it forms no homogeneous mixture, but, alien-like, is hurried along in the circulation, to be eliminated, in great part, as speedily as possible, that which is retained producing very equivocal effects, and in many instances painful and fatal diseases. It escapes by the way of the lungs, as shown in the breath of those who have been drinking ardent spirits or strong wines, and also by the skin and kidneys. That portion of the alcohol which is retained in the body accumulates most readily in the brain and liver, and it has been found in its pure state after death in these organs, especially in the brain. The first manifest effects of an alcoholic liquor are on the brain and nervous system generally, on which it acts, in a small dose, as an excitant, and in a larger one as a narcotic. Other parts are affected in a corresponding manner, being at first stimulated, not strengthened, and afterwards retarded and weakened in their action. For example, the heart, that wonderful and, during life, never-ceasing pump, when its inner surface is reached by the tide of blood containing alcohol, works away so much the faster to get rid of the intruder; in so doing its machinery is needlessly strained, and if this be continued from day to day is more apt to be deranged and sooner worn out. Under the operation of the prolonged use of alcoholic liquors the heart often becomes hypertrophied or morbidly thickened, and at other times dilated and thinner in its substance; or a still werse condition supervenesits muscular texture is converted into fatty matter, and it fails to contract with the requisite force and regularity, and is liable at any moment to cease beating. In this sud-den cessation of the heart's action is found an explanation of some of the sudden deaths of which we read. These destructive effects of the use of alcoholic liquors are not by any means confined to drunkards; they are seen in persons who had never been intoxicated during their lives, but who had been regular drinkers of these liquors. The liver is diseased in a similar manner from the like cause .- From "What Shall We Drink?" in the April number of Lippincott's Magazine.

How Dan Donnelly Found a Rason For Drinking.—"The dirty blagard! He brought the wife on me, and me innocent as the child unborn. He came in here one day, with a grate scrape, for Dan affects 'quality manners,' he having seen the world.

"Your riverence,' says he, presenting a great horn, 'this is a quare bottle. "'Ye bosthoon, says I, "it's an owld ante-diluvian cow's horn, judging by the size. And what may be in it, Dan?"

"Faix, I'm tould it's potheen, says he, but meself has not drawn the cork. It's a grate grief I can't. I'm on me oath agin it, Father Mick. I thought you'd like to see a horn bottle, the first ever I seen, an' I brought it

"'It's a grate horn entirely, and you may lave it, Dan, said I, jestingly, 'for I have a reverence for old things. You are sworn against the contents; I am not.'

"'I'd be proud to lave it wid ver riverence, an' tin times the like of it, but I daren't, said Dan, 'for it's not all out mine.'

"Well, I returned the horn, and without draming the laste harm, I said, 'It's a curiosity, Dan, and may the drink in it do you Mind ye don't make a beast of yourself. Drink is for man's health and comfort, and not to destroy him body and soul and make a fool and rogue of him to boot, which is worse in the world's eye than infidelity. It is necessary to keep on a level with heaven and earth both, Dan. Take pattern by me.' "I would wid all my bones,' returned Dan, 'but I'd like to taste the dhrink would overcome you, Father Mick; I'm in belief they've left off distillin' it.' "The unhanged vagabond! He thought he paid me a compliment. It's little they know I am often drinking the pure spring water when they're content it's whisky. The women know the secret and keep it; my blessing on them for it! "But I was a deluded priest that day, though there is satisfaction in knowing I was not the first had the feather drawn over his

"On the word of a gentleman and priest, believe it, Dan's ugly, red-headed, weasel-eyed, vixen old wife—the harridan! she was ten years older than Dan-was here next morning by screech of day, hanging about my premises like an unclean spirit, waiting till she could pounce on me out of reach and hearing of old Peggy: and that same she succeeded in. I tell you I had not the least idea of the hag's intentions, so I fell victim to her quite asy and natural—bad luck to her that I should say so! for in my heart I wish ill to no human soul.

"'Priest,' said she, 'why did ye giv Dan lave to dhrink, and him sworn agin it, an' you knowin' it?'

"'I didn't,' said I.
"'Ye did,' said she, 'an' he's rowling dhrunk now, an' says you gev it him.' "Give him "rowling drunk," Biddy! said I, joking on her trip of the tongue, for she was beginning to look like Nell Cafferty's cat, the biggest divil between the two ends of Ireland, no dog daring to go within a mile of her—'gave him "rolling drunk," Biddy?' said I, in my pleasantest way, thinking to soothe her; 'how could I give him "rowling drunk," Biddy, mo caroibhin cno? If he's "rowling drunk," it's the whisky he got the distemper from, the perjured sinner! "A female fury makes me nervous, throws me out altogether. "'Och, says she, 'but yer nate at a joke, mighty nate; it does one's heart and sowl good to hear you: I feel the betther already.

My sarvis to ye! I see yer gilty, an' Holy

Mary help me, the bishop shall hear of yer thricks. "And away she went across the bog, laving me bothered. It came out that Dan's oath went to this-that he would not touch drink again till it was put into his haud by the priest; and sure I did put it into the fellow's hand, though innocent of the interpretation he put on it. So it was Dan found a rason for drinking, the nefarious rascal! But I settled with him for his perjury and deceit of me. Biddy was on her knees to me ever after."

The priest's nectar was fine, the reason for drinking it good, and the story gave additional zest. Dan was a model of his kind-"Dan of the hern" they call him to this day.
